to Remand and in support thereof respectfully shows the Court the following:

I. BACKGROUND

1. On July 2, 2002, an action was commenced in the 28th Judicial District Court of the State of Texas in and for Nueces County, Texas, entitled PAMELA J. PASCHAL, Individually and as Independent Executrix of the Estate of JEFFREY S. PASCHAL, Deceased, and as next friend of KATHLEEN PASCHAL, a minor, JENNIFER PASCHAL; MARY ANN FASSNACHT, Individually and as Personal Representative of the Estate of EDWARD R. FASSNACHT, Deceased, and as next friend of ANNA MARIE FASSNACHT, a minor and EDWARD FASSNACHT, a minor; ROBERT EDWARD FASSNACHT; DEBORAH LOUISE MALINSKY, Individually and as heir-at-law of DAVID RUTHERFORD, Deceased; AMY BRIDGES JACOBS, Individually and as Independent Executrix of the Estate of SHAWN O. JACOBS; STEVE JACOBS; SHIRLEY CHOATE; SEAN PALYO; and JEREMY YAKLIN, Plaintiffs, v. KAYDON CORPORATION; THE ARMOLOY CORPORATION; ARMOLOY OF ILLINOIS, INC.; ARMOLOY OF CONNECTICUT, INC.; INVESTMENT HOLDINGS, INC.; and SIKORSKY AIRCRAFT CORPORATION, Defendants, Civil No. 02-3319-A.

2. On or about July 17, 2002, Defendant Kaydon Corporation filed the Notice of Removal of Action under 28 U.S.C. §1442(a)(1)

Federal Officer Removal Statute, in that this case raises issues subject to the Government Contractor Defense.

3. On or about August 14, 2002, Plaintiffs filed their Motion to Remand alleging that this Court does not have removal jurisdiction under Section 1442(a)(1).

4. Defendant would respectfully show this Court that Plaintiffs' Motion to Remand is without legal or factual merit and, therefore, should, in all things, be denied.

II. ARGUMENT AND AUTHORITIES

5. The Government Contractor Defense as established in *Boyle v. United Technologies Corporation*¹ and its progeny makes this case removable under 28 U.S.C. § 1442(a)(1). Defendant was acting under federal officers in designing, manufacturing and supplying bearings and/or other components for the MH-53E Sea Dragon Helicopter to the United States Military.

6. Plaintiffs allege that this statute does not authorize removal because Defendant's assertion that it is entitled to the Government Contractor Defense is insufficient to confer removal jurisdiction. Plaintiffs have misconstrued the jurisdiction statute and ignored the case law in this area. The U.S. Supreme

Court has held that under Section 1442, suits against federal officers may be removed despite the non-federal cast of the complaint; the federal question element is met if the defense depends on federal law.² Furthermore, the Court stated that in order to qualify for removal an officer must raise both a colorable defense and establish that the suit is for an act under color of office.³

7. The Fifth Circuit has given full treatment to the question of removal under the Section 1442(a)(1) Federal Officer Removal Statute in the cases of *Miller v. Diamond Shamrock, et al.*⁴ and *Winters v. Diamond Shamrock Chemical Co, et al.*⁵ In the Winters case, the Court enumerated the three prong test which is used to determine whether Section 1442 removal is appropriate.⁶ First, a defendant seeking removal under Section 1442 must demonstrate that they are "persons" within the meaning of the statute. Second, the defendant must demonstrate that a causal nexus exists between the defendant's actions, taken pursuant to a federal officer's directions and under color of federal office, and the plaintiff's claims. Third, the defendant must assert a "colorable federal defense."

⁵ 149 F.3d 387 (5th Cir. 1997).

⁶ Id. at 397.

8. Defendant satisfies all three requirements listed above for removal under Section 1442. The Fifth Circuit has previously held, that corporate entities qualify as "persons" under Section 1442(a)(1).⁷ Therefore, the first prong of the test is satisfied.

9. With regard to the second prong, as previously noted, Defendant was acting under the direction of federal officers in designing, manufacturing and supplying bearing assemblies to the U.S. Military. The Fifth Circuit has held that the statute's "color of federal office" requirement is neither "limited" nor "narrow", but should be afforded a broad reading so as not to frustrate the statute's underlying rationale.⁸ The Court explained that the question to determine for the second prong analysis is whether the government specified the composition of the material or product at issue so as to supply the causal nexus between the federal officer's directions and the Plaintiff's claims. Clearly, in the case at bar the causal nexus exists as the specifications and design directives were being handed down and/or reviewed and approved by the federal officers under which Defendant was working.

⁷ Winters, 149 F.3d at 398 (citing International Primate Protection League, No. 93-3067, at 2 (5th Cir. May 4, 1994) (unpublished opinion)).

⁸ Id. at 398.

10. Finally, a colorable federal defense is present since the Government Contractor Defense affords Defendant a defense in this case. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that when a defendant asserts a colorable federal defense under Section 1442, it need not show that the defense is meritorious, but only whether there is a colorable claim to such a defense.⁹ Winters v. Diamond Shamrock, supra, clearly establishes that Defendant's need not prove the asserted defense but need only articulate its "colorable" applicability to the Plaintiff's claims. The officer need not win his case before he can have it removed.¹⁰

11. The U.S. Supreme Court set out the test for immunity under the Government Contractor Defense in Boyle.¹¹ The Court wrote that "[l]iability for design defects in military equipment cannot be imposed, pursuant to state law, when (1) the United States approved reasonably precise specifications; (2) the equipment conformed to those specifications; and (3) the supplier warned the United States about the dangers in the use of the equipment that were known to the supplier but not to the United States."¹²

¹⁰ Winters at 400, citing Willingham.

¹¹ 487 U.S. 500, 512 (1988).

¹² Id.

12. Defendant has alleged that it meets the requirements established in Boyle. Specifically, Defendant will show that it manufactured and supplied bearings to the U.S. Military in accordance with military procurement contracts which required adherence to government approved design specifications. See Exhibit "1", affidavit of Michael R. Purchase.

13. Defendant was acting under federal officers at all times in the design and manufacture of the equipment in question. The equipment provided to the military conformed to the specifications approved by the government, as indicated by the Department of Defense Form 250, Material Inspection and Receiving Report for this bearing.¹³ Defendant's assertion of the Government Contractor Defense is certainly "colorable" for Section 1442 removal purposes in this case.

14. Plaintiffs also assert that the Government Contractor Defense does not apply in this case because they plead a manufacturing defect in that the bearings allegedly were not manufactured according to government specifications. The Fifth Circuit in *Bailey v. McDonnell Douglas Corporation*¹⁴ discussed whether the "manufacturing defect" label precluded application of the government contractor defense. The court recognized that the mere labeling of a defect as a "manufacturing defect" does not necessarily mean that it is not in compliance with government specifications and, thus, the "manufacturing defect" label on a claim does not preclude application of the government contractor defense.¹⁵ Furthermore, the denomination of a claim as either a "manufacturing defect" or a "design defect" is a matter of state law and varies by state. In Harduvel v. General Dynamics Corp., the Eleventh Circuit held that where under Florida law a presumption of a manufacturing defect arises when the product is destroyed in an accident, state law could not govern the applicability of the government contractor defense. It concluded that, despite its state law label, the claim was for a design defect for purposes of federal law.¹⁶

¹³ DD Form 250 attached to Exhibit "1", Purchase Affidavit, on which U.S. Government inspector certified bearing serial number 766 conformed to government specifications.

¹⁴ 989 F.2d 794 (5th Cir. 1993).

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Defendant prays that Plaintiffs' Motion for Remand be denied, and for such other and further relief, both in law or equity to which it may show itself justly entitled to receive.

¹⁵ Bailey v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 989 F.2d 794, 801 (5th Cir. 1993).

¹⁶ Id. at 801 (citing Harduvel v. General Dynamics Corp., 878 F.2d 1311, 1317 (11th Cir. 1989)).

CIVIL ACTION NO. C-02-312

AFFIDAVIT OF MICHAEL R. PURCHASE

STATE OF MICHIGAN §
COUNTY OF MUSKEGON §

BEFORE ME, the undersigned authority, on this day personally appeared Michael R. Purchase, and after being duly sworn by me stated as follows:

1. My name is Michael R. Purchase. I am over the age of eighteen and fully competent and authorized to make this Affidavit. The following facts and circumstances are within my personal knowledge, based upon my experiences and documents reviewed by me, and are true and correct.

2. I am currently Vice President Engineering for Kaydon Corporation Custom Bearings (hereinafter Kaydon), located at Muskegon, Michigan. I have been employed with Kaydon for approximately 20 years. In my current position I have considerable involvement with and responsibilities for the duplex bearing used in the swashplate assembly for the military MH-53E and CH-53E helicopter.

3. I am familiar with the design and manufacturing process of the duplex bearing used in the CH-53E and MH-53E helicopter swashplate assembly. Sikorsky Aircraft Corporation (hereinafter Sikorsky) provided the duplex bearing drawing to Kaydon that prescribes the design requirements for the bearing. Kaydon Corporation has no authority to deviate from this drawing without prior written authorization from Sikorsky.

4. After the May 9, 1996, CH-53E helicopter mishap at the Sikorsky Aircraft Corporation plant located in Stratford, Connecticut, numerous meetings occurred between Sikorsky and Kaydon employees to review the design requirements for bearing improvement. As a result of these meetings, Sikorsky established new design requirements for the swashplate duplex bearing. This resulted in the so-called second generation -043 swashplate duplex bearing manufactured according to Revision E of the Sikorsky drawing and Request To Engineering RTE 94367, RTE 93768, RTE 94894, and Engineering Order EO 50208, and EO 50210.

5. To the best of my knowledge, swashplate duplex bearing serial number 766 was the swashplate duplex bearing installed on the U.S. Navy MH-53E helicopter involved in the mishap on August 10, 2000 off the coast of Corpus Christi, Texas.

6. Kaydon was required by Sikorsky to use Armoloy of Illinois as the only approved source for the Thin Dense Chrome (TDC) plating applied to bearing serial number 766. Kaydon had no authority to use another source for TDC plating.

7. During the June 1996 to December of 1996 period, Kaydon's Muskegon facility, which manufactures the bearing, had numerous representatives from the U.S. Navy, Defense Contract Management Command, and Sikorsky performing various inspection and review activities. Bearing serial number 766 was produced in accordance with the Sikorsky design changes and increased inspection criteria implemented over this time period.

8. Final inspection of duplex bearing serial number 766 was accepted by both the U.S. Government inspector and Sikorsky inspector. Both of these inspectors signed the Kaydon shipping document (packing slip), indicating inspection and acceptance of bearing serial number 766 meeting specifications. A true and correct copy of the packing slip maintained at Kaydon Corporation is attached to this affidavit.

9. The government inspector also on November 21, 1996 signed the Department of Defense Form 250, Material Inspection and Receiving Report, indicating the bearing at issue in this litigation conformed to contract specifications and accepted the bearing on behalf of the U.S. Government. A true and correct copy of the DD form 250 on file at Kaydon Corporation for bearing serial number 766 is attached to this affidavit.

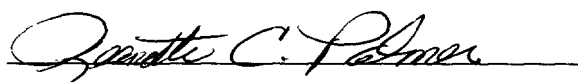

10. I am not aware from my position in Kaydon Corporation of any instance in which Kaydon withheld design information regarding possible dangers of this bearing from the U.S. Navy or Sikorsky. To the contrary, Kaydon has identified areas that should be of concern to the Navy and Sikorsky to improve the performance of the swashplate duplex bearing and minimize risk of failure.

Subject to penalty of perjury, further Affiant sayeth not.
